KANCHEEPURAM SILK

The Kanchipuram silk saree, originating from Tamil Nadu's Kanchipuram region, is renowned for its exquisite craftsmanship and rich cultural significance. The origins of the Kanjeevaram silk sari can be traced back to Hindu mythology. According to legend, the Kanchi Silk Weaver is a descendant of Sage Marcanda, known as the Gods' Master Weaver. The then-famous two weaving groups called "Saligars" and "Devangas" settled in the district of Kanchipuram and exhibited their expertise in silk weaving here. Some sarees even incorporate images of temple inscriptions and figures, showcasing superior-weaving skills and historical narratives. Kanchipuram silk sarees are treasured as symbols of elegance, tradition, and status, worn prominently at weddings, festivals, and cultural ceremonies.

UNIQUENESS

The distinctive weaving technique of a Kanchipuram silk saree uses three single threads of silk yarn along with zari, that is, silk threads dipped in liquid gold and silver. Their distinguishing feature is the wide contrast borders adorned with intricate designs such as temple borders, checks, stripes, and floral motifs (burras).
